Summary of the grant:	Through this project, INJECT intends to increase the citizens and civil society participation in policy-making processes and in over-seeing how the justice and rule of law sector is being governed. To achieve this goal, an update will be done on the data regarding the disciplinary measures taken against judges and there will be an increase in transparency in cases of private property disputes involving women. In addition to this, it is intended that NGOs and the public monitor the justice institutions and their performance. To achieve these results, research on the disciplinary measures taken against judges during the last three years will be carried out, including a research on the delays in women's property cases throughout Kosovo. Furthermore, several discussion tables with stakeholders will be organized, and Judicial Council meetings and disciplinary measures against judges and prosecutors will be monitored. In addition to this, focus groups with individuals that use judicial services will be organized, and free legal aid will be offered. Throughout the project, public pressure through media will also enhance.
